Learn the practical and tangible tools of a true friend.

The course teaches four steps, ancient energetic processes and techniques, with which to aid the dying and their families, and, the fundamental, experiential hands-on process of becoming familiar with one's true nature and one's own luminous body.

In this way, one is ready to offer these four stages heartfully and gracefully to a loved one, or patient, in their most important transition.

In this course, we learn the tools of a good friend. Ironically, this course will also teach a person how to be more alive and present, under all circumstances.

The great death rites practiced by the indigenous traditions allow us to understand the psychological and emotional closure needed by a loved one at the time of their greatest and most important transition.

Those traditions have provided specific steps and tools to bring reconciliation and healing both to the loved ones and to the person dying.

This course was created to help everyone involved in the dying process to prepare

This continuing nursing education activity was approved for 13 Contact Hours by the Florida Nurses Association an approved provider of the Florida Board of Nursing 50-3103.
